Vol 11 | 2024

Letter From the Editor

Dear Reader,

Welcome to the eleventh issue of the Medical Student Press Journal, a peer-reviewed, open-access journal that highlights a variety of pieces, from original research articles to creative writing, to essays exploring both the science and the beauty of medicine. We are excited to feature medical student authors from across the world who have written on a variety of topics, including patient navigator programs, Obsessive Compulsive Disorder, and the COVID-19 pandemic. Our publication serves as an outlet for students to explore and reflect on experiences they have had in their medical training in a thoughtful, introspective manner.

Each of the articles in this edition represents work by students who show such passion for medicine that goes beyond the norm, and we are incredibly proud of the efforts of the physicians of the future. We are grateful for the authors, reviewers, editors, and mentors that make this journal possible and hope that their work will continue to inspire further passion for the field we're all privileged to call our vocations.

Sincerely,

Tenzin Palkyi, Editor-in-Chief

Maria del Mundo, Editor-in-Chief
